

Momentum builds for second edition of Nonwovens Circular Forum

22 September 2021

Over 140+ key stakeholders to join online and live discussion on challenges and opportunities in the pursuit of a circular economy

With over 140 delegates including key stakeholders and industry players expected the second edition of EDANA's Circular Nonwovens Forum will provide an interactive platform for engaged professionals to discuss the latest trends and innovations around circularity within the sector.

To be held on the 30th of September both online and in person at La Hulpe Brussels, the forum is targeted at anyone that is keen on driving the circular economy for the nonwovens industry. Nonwoven manufacturers, their suppliers and converters are increasingly focused on finding circular and sustainable solutions and this gathering creates a platform for an in-depth engagement with stakeholders on challenges and opportunities in the pursuit of a circular economy for nonwovens.

"It is rewarding to see this event take off with the continued engagement of the industry" said Gil Stevens, Director of Sustainability and External Relations at EDANA. "To witness the eagerness of a range of experts to join us is especially pleasing, and I am very much looking forward to an informative and collaborative day."
